
Maddin Hauser Adds Depth to Real Estate and Corporate and Employment Practices with Jordan Segal

Maddin, Hauser, Roth & Heller, P.C., is pleased to announce that Jordan B. Segal joined the firm as an associate attorney. He is a member of the Real Estate and Corporate and Employment practice groups.

Jordan represents clients across a broad range of business and employment matters. He regularly drafts employee noncompetition, nonsolicitation, and nondisclosure agreements, as well as architectural, engineering, and construction contracts. He helps companies protect valuable proprietary information by reviewing data security, privacy policies, and internal procedures. Jordan also advises startup businesses on corporate structuring and investor relations requirements.

“Jordan’s wealth of expertise in real estate, business, and employment matters strengthens our ability to meet clients’ growing legal needs with practical solutions,” said Steven D. Sallen, the firm’s president and CEO.

Jordan previously served as general counsel for a national real estate developer, giving him insight into understanding nuanced issues from the client’s perspective. While there, he provided legal advice in all aspects of commercial real estate development, including zoning, permitting, construction, acquisitions, sales, commercial leases, title review, entity formation, corporate maintenance, and project financing.

Jordan is a frequent contributor to academic and business journals, including Michigan Business Law Journal, Compliance Today, and Cooley Law Review. Admitted to practice in Michigan and Maryland, Jordan actively participates in the Business Law Section of the Michigan Bar Association, where he serves as chair of the In-House Counsel Committee.
